DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter, which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 5-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. In claim 5 on line 4 the term "while increasing a ratio" is vague and indefinite. It is not clear whether the increasing is continuous during the heating period or if it is just a one-time occurrence. Correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1,2,9,10,13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over JP 1781' in view of Brooks et al. JP 1781' teaches the claimed cooking device except for showing the on/off heating period as preset. The patent to Brooks et al is applied for teaching that it is conventional to use a preset on/off-heating period when a target temperature is attained in an oven controller, with the benefit of a less costly device and more accurate temperature control. In view of this teaching it would have been obvious to modify the Jp system to use a preset on/off final heating period since such modification would effect more accurate temperature control and a less costly device. As per claim 2 note that a range is taught in brooks et al and it is also conventional to use hysteresis control in common heating control systems.

Claims 3,4,11,12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over JP 1781a' in view of Brooks et al as applied to claims 12,2,9,10,13 above, and further in view of Ohnishi et al. Jp as modified teaches the claimed subject matter except for showing the claimed on-off ratio as 1.5-3. Ohnishi et al teach use of a 1:3 ration and in view of this teaching it would have been obvious to further modify the JP system to use the same, such obvious choice depending on the design parameters of the system.

Claims 14 and 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Jp 1781a in view of Couch. Jp teaches the claimed subject matter except for showing use of stand-by control for the heating device. Couch is applied for teaching stand-by control as conventional and leading to faster heat up time in a cooking device and in view of this teaching it would have been obvious to modify the JP system further to include the same, to effect a faster heat up time.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 5-8 are allowed.

The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: the prior art of record does not teach the claimed ratio increasing in combination with preset on/off at a certain temperature range as claimed.

Claim 17 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims. The claimed temperature control routine specifying half of the set temperature set forth in claim 17 is not taught in the prior art of record.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Austin and Shafrir et al are cited for disclosing heating control devices of interest.
